DANIELSON

Funeral services for Charles M. Adams were held at his home on Academy street Friday at noon. Rev. Walter B. Williams of the Westfield Congregational church officiating. E. H. Keach, J. Walter Atwood, A. P. Woodward, E. L. Darrin, Charles Austin and Albert E. Fields, representing various Masonic organizations of which Mr. Adams was a member acted as bearers. Burial was in Westfield cemetery. L. B. Kennedy was the funeral director.

There are ten prisoners at Windham county jail in Brooklyn this week-end, the largest number held there at any one time for months. Two of the prisoners are bound over for trial at the superior court. The others are serving sentences for having been intoxicated, the latest of this group coming in Friday morning, from Putnam. Most of those who are locked up on account of drunkenness have been drinking Jamaica ginger.

At Goodyear a great quantity of material has been assembled for use in construction of the big spinning plant to be built there. Several hundred thousands of dollars is represented in the mountains of cement, re-enforcing rods, tile, lumber and other materials that are piled up about the mill site.

Monday, July 19, is set as the date for the departure of the members of C. Company, State Guard, for the annual encampment at Nahant. The boys will be in camp for a week. C. Company is an infantry organization, whereas for years past, prior to the war, Danielson's military companies were coast artillery organizations and spent their encampment periods at some of the island forts.

From Ballouville comes a report that a motorcycle spinning the high way above Daniel's Village, just beyond Ballouville, saw a wildcat crossing the highway. Said wildcat had a partridge in its mouth, carrying it and had captured the bird. All of which is proving of interest to hunters throughout the town, where a wild cat has not been seen for years and the prospect of them to inquire what makes a wild cat wild in these strictly tame days.

Discussions at East Killingly, of whether Latter Day Saints are of the same church and faith as Mormons has stirred Edward Gleaser, general representative of the Church of Latter Day Saints to offer $100 reward to any resident of East Killingly who can prove that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ is officially connected with the Mormon Church of Utah. Mr. Gleaser has announced a writing to be held at East Killingly at 7 o'clock the people may hear us in our own defense.

Strange as it may seem to those who know of the record high wages that have been paid to mill operatives in this town for several years past, it is nevertheless a fact that the present brief black period in the woolen industry here finds some of the beneficiaries of high wages flat broke and forced into other lines of endeavor to keep the wolf from the door. These unfortunate cases are an exception and not the rule, however, for most of the workers—and they have labored conscientiously—have surplus money on hand and are really enjoying a well earned rest.

At East Killingly Clarence Smith is completing a bungalow that is exclusively the work of his own hands, even from the time the tract was bought to the lumber was felled in the woods. The bungalow is said to be exceedingly attractive.

Frank L. Davis, county agent of the Windham County Farmers' association, announced Friday that at a recent meeting of the town directors and executive committee of the association it was the opinion of those present that the membership of the association should be increased now being followed. At present the association has about 500 members, and the desire of those who have the drive in charge is to increase it to 1,000.

A motor trip was enjoyed Thursday by Mr. and Mrs. Richard Carpenter, their daughters, Misses Marion and Eleanor, Kenneth C. Ballard and Ethel Kinney. The party went to Lake Massachusetts and visited the top of Bald Hill from where it is possible to see Long Island sound, also Mount Tom. This is the highest point in Windham county.

There is much interest in Putnam and surrounding towns in the meeting of the directors of the Connecticut company which is to be held at New London today (Saturday) and at which meeting matters pertaining to the Putnam division are to be discussed. The Connecticut company operates the trolley line running from West Thompson south through Putnam, Danville, Danbury to New Britain and New London. It has been generally understood that for some time the division has not been a paying proposition, and there has been anxious speculation concerning its future. Replacement of the present cars running over the line by the one-man cars has been suggested as one possible remedy of the existing condition.

Bradley theatre was filled Friday night when a special benefit entertainment was arranged by the board of the board of the Day Kimball hospital to raise greatly needed funds. The feature of the program was the presentation of a picture, a picture of Jack London's famous story, "The Daylight." The picture was released for presentation only a few weeks ago. There was also a special dancing number by Lucille Irene Carson. The women's board of the hospital, of which Mrs. Little Leach is president, is an organization that devises means of raising funds for the many necessary expenses that must be annually met at the hospital. Recently it contributed $2,000 to the purchase of a new motor ambulance, and it is now planning to help furnish the interior of the new addition to the hospital as soon as this is completed.

Miss Leonard Galt of Church street is spending a few days in New Haven.
Edward Angell returned to Putnam Thursday night from Trenton, N. J., where he has been employed recently. Friday he went to Springfield for the day.

John Creighton, for many years a resident of Putnam, appeared before Judge Mahlon H. Geisler in the Putnam city court Friday morning to answer to charges of intoxication. He was picked up by Sgt. George Laird early Friday morning on the starway leading to the Moose hall, over the store of W. H. Martin & Co. in the center of the town. Creighton insisted that he was not drunk but merely sleepy. He said he had gone to his home on lower Main street but dozed off, and on getting up he found himself in the center of the town and eventually retired at the spot where he was found. The man's appearance, as it is the testimony of the police, was that of a man who had been drinking. Captain of Police John Bulger, convinced the judge that Creighton was guilty of the charges brought against him, consequently he was fined $10.00 and costs amounting to $10.14. About this time the accused decided that possibly he had been drinking a little too much. Creighton said he was having a good time with the fellows over the holiday, and that he and his friends had managed to consume hard liquor in the center of the town. He told this to the court and offered it as an explanation for his appearance.

Employees of the Connecticut company, which controls the trolley line running through Putnam, arrived here Friday night and were working on the street car line between Grove and King streets. When the state highway was put in last fall and this spring the roadway on each side of the car line was dropped several inches. At the time the line was being lowered, the workers were unable to lower their tracks to the level of the street. When the line went back to the control of the Connecticut company, they were able to lower the tracks to the level of the street. They agreed to attend to the matter at once. Now, after considerable delay, the work has been begun.

Thomas Pappagallo, who gave his address as 14 Putnam street, was arrested Thursday afternoon by Chief of Police Canty in Webster, Mass., and locked up at the police headquarters of that town on a charge of larceny. Pappagallo, with his wife had gone to the Massachusetts town for the day in order to enjoy an outing at Webster lake. The story of Pappagallo's arrest as it has come to Putnam is as follows: Shortly after noon Thursday James Bartholomew, who conducts a fruit store on the main street in Webster, called on Chief Canty and asked him to come to his store and ordered ten cents' worth of candy, in payment for which he handed out a two dollar bill. The proprietor claims that when he gave the Putnam man his change the latter insisted that he had given a ten dollar bill to the clerk. Words followed, in which Bartholomew alleged that his customer threatened to "clean the place out." Fearing trouble he called the police, but Pappagallo hurried away.

Chief Canty began a search for Pappagallo and found him entering the ten-cent store, not far away. The chief followed, and keeping an eye on Pappagallo, states that he saw the latter put two cents and a half into the bag and was scurrying. From this store Pappagallo went to the tailoring shop of A. Leitch, closely followed by the officer, who did not enter the shop but waited outside. Soon Leitch hurried out looking for the police and claiming that a man in his shop had taken a roll of woolen cloth and put it in his bag. Pappagallo was then arrested and, upon opening his bag, the combs hair brush and cloth which the man is charged with stealing were found. The picnic luncheon which Pappagallo and his wife had prepared for their outing was also in the bag. Mrs. Pappagallo, who during the time her husband is said to have been visiting the Webster store was a guest at the home of a friend, was notified of her husband's arrest and was at a loss to account for his strange behavior. She said he had not been drinking. The case will be heard in Nathaniel S. Child, 37, died Thursday at his home in East Woodstock.

There is still much discussion in Putnam concerning the demonstration early Monday morning which was a part of the Fourth of July celebration. In trying to satisfy himself as to why a mob of 200 men and boys would go to the extreme of bombarding private homes, assaulting women, and ringing a false fire alarm, one prominent citizen of Putnam has concluded that the blame, if anyone at all is to blame, rests not with any particular individuals or with any department of the city government but with the municipality as a whole. He believes that because no formal program had been arranged for the holiday the crowd elaborated in an unorganized way, and even its behavior degenerated into abuse of privileges granted to celebrators. Said this man Friday: "These fellows were going to celebrate; they had their minds all made up to celebrate, and the scene in them was just bound to come out. Inasmuch as the city did not supply any means of orderly celebration, nothing in the nature of a prepared program for the day's entertainment, the crowd let its energy loose in its own way."

While this is a somewhat ingenious theory, the fact remains that the affair last Monday was a disgrace to Putnam. In speaking of it at the meeting of the common council Alderman John G. Johnson said: "I have lived in Putnam now for 14 years, and the rowdiness last Monday is the most disgraceful thing that has occurred since I have been here. I am certain that the police could have picked out the ringleaders of the crowd who were behaving in direct violation of law and order, and they should have been in court the following morning. I wish here at this council meeting to enter my protest against this disgraceful affair."

Alderman Johnson explained that he did not think the police could have gone into the crowd and made an arrest while the celebration was in progress, but he saw no reason why names could not have been taken and offenders brought into court the following day. He realized, he said, that the police were far outnumbered. "It is too bad," he went on, "that we didn't turn the fire hose on those hoodlums. I was a boy once, and I know the fun of celebrating, but when fellows go about to destroy property and make a nuisance of themselves, a halt should be called."

Alderman Johnson ended his discussion of the situation by declaring that the city of Putnam at the present time is "in bad." "Another deplorable condition here is drunkenness," he emphasized. "In a town with no saloons we find it on our streets, and getting worse. Come home late at night and you will find men reeling from public houses, and men playing craps on the corners. It is deplorable, and it is the duty of the police to clean up and defying law and order. I am not hard on the police, for I know that it is difficult for men to patrol the large territory the police have to patrol in Putnam. I know it is easy for men playing craps, and even those who are intoxicated, to evade the police. But what I do mean to infer is that we are in bad at the present time."

There was some evidence Friday afternoon that the Monday episode had not been forgotten by the authorities and that the police are getting hold of the thing, and that these have been handed over to the authorities during the last day or two.

Clerks from business houses and shops in the north end of Putnam and those from the stores in the south end of the city played ball Thursday afternoon on the high school grounds as a means of celebrating their half holiday. A box into the crowd of celebrators, for the score of the game is not available, for the supply of scoring blanks gave out before the game was half over. The north end clerks won, and the available figures show the score to have been 15 to 0. Chas. and Smith twirled for the south enders, while Chase was behind the bat. Incidentally, he had but little work to do, as but few balls got past the batters of the Providence street team. Paucher and Durrell were the battery for the north end.
